But one day, the two went missing.

And all they left behind was a bag of catnip.

Chapter 7 by Amelia Rose

The world, that had been so caught up in the athletic, adorable, cats, was shocked by the sudden disappearance. Walking down the main street of any town, you could see it. People, sitting in what seemed like a bubble, not responding, just crying silently to themselves, and occasionally whispering, it's not right. This can't be right.

There were theories that the cats were kidnapped, stolen from their homes by rival athletes. There were others that they were murdered. Even more popular was the idea that the cats were going undercover, as they were also secret agents.

In reality, the two cats were simply tired of the spotlight. They ran away, together, into the wild, to get away from the prying eyes.

Chapter 8 by SaintSayaka

The two, in truth, had fallen in love. They wed in silence, and gave birth to a clan of strong, athletic-loving kittens.

Some went on to star in Air Bud spin-offs.

Some started their own sports careers, being sure to stray their identities far away from those of their parents. And when the spotlight was too much, they, too, returned to the forest with their mates, to do as their parents did.

And some started to call themselves Warriors, creating equally powerful Clans...
